Rails, Resorts & Road Trips

On Friday, September 11, 18 members met at Schnecksville to start the tour. Only one classic car took the trip — Lester's 1990 Cadillac. After breakfast, we drove to Scranton and Steamtown. Last year we went to the trolley and its museum, but this time it was the railroad museum and a short diesel train ride. Most of the engines and rail cars came from a previous museum in Vermont about 40 years ago. One of the engines is a Big Boy #4012, the same type that came to Reading earlier this summer. However, this engine is inoperable and just for show. Historically, the trains started running from Buffalo to Scranton and then to New York City in the 1800s to haul coal and produce. After an ice cream stop, we headed to the Lukens Farm Resort.

I think everyone enjoyed our stay at Lukens. The rooms were large with comfortable beds. We were served 2 dinners and 2 breakfasts, family-style. No one went away from any meal hungry.

The farm grows its own vegetables and even has chickens and goats. There was a pool, walking paths, and beautiful gardens. We even played bingo on Friday and Saturday nights.

On Saturday, we drove to Honesdale and toured the Wayne County Historical Museum. We saw the Sturbridge Lion, a replica of the first steam locomotive to run in the Western Hemisphere. The museum had lots of interesting exhibits, the routes of the gravity railroad that carried coal across the mountains and an exhibit about a native son, General Lyman Lemnitzer, who eventually became NATO director. There was also a big display of arrowheads and a dugout Indian canoe.

There was also a display of crystalware and nightgowns made in local factories. Then we went to the old stone jail, which was in use until 1935. It was dark and gloomy, resembling a dungeon. The guide told us about jailbreaks and hangings there. Later we went to an old home along the D & H canal. It was probably a stop along the canal for dinner and drinks. The guide told us how the canal was dug by hand and ran til 1898. It took 5 days to transport goods to NYC. The canal remnants were there.

On Sunday morning, after the rain stopped, we went to the Wallenpaupack visitor center. There we saw how the lake was built 100 years ago by the hydroelectric company. Minnie told us how she and her mother drove a 1938 Buick here in 1955. They drove to the lake to visit relatives and experienced a hurricane and much flooding while they were here. The town even had to helicopter milk and food in to feed children. Afterward, we did a one-hour boat ride on the Lake . After lunch, everyone went their separate way home.

How do we get more people interested in our club?

Last month, I talked about giving AI a "test drive" as a tool to help our club work a little smarter. This month, I want to take that idea one step further and ask how AI, combined with social media, could help more people discover who we are and what we do.

Maybe the answer isn't simply to ask people to join. Maybe it starts by helping them see what they are missing.

When people hear the words "antique car club," they may picture a group of people standing around old cars. But those of us who are already part of the Ontelaunee Region know that there is much more to it than that.

We take tours. We visit museums. We explore local history. We travel together. We eat together. We attend shows, banquets, meetings, and community events. We share stories, knowledge, memories, and friendships.

The question is: how do we show that to people who are not already part of the club? This is where online tools and artificial intelligence (AI) may help.

AI does not need to replace anything we already do. Instead, it can help us share the experiences we are already having with more people.

Think about our recent tour. One weekend gave us photographs, stories, historic locations, train rides, museums, meals, beautiful scenery, and plenty of memories. Those experiences could become much more than one newsletter article. In fact, we have more photographs than will fit in the newsletter.

With the help of AI, photographs from a tour could be turned into a short video (reel), a carousel, or a set of posts. A member could tell the story of a favorite car, and AI could help turn that conversation into a short content series. We could share quick pieces of local automotive history or highlight places we plan to visit on future tours.

The goal would not be to post more just for the sake of posting. The goal would be to help people see the people behind the cars.

Someone who sees a video from one of our tours may think, "That looks like fun." Someone interested in local history may discover our club through a video about an old railroad or automobile. Someone may attend one of our shows and then discover online that we also have tours, meetings, dinners, and other activities throughout the year. That person may eventually decide to join us.

Membership growth begins long before someone fills out an application. It begins when someone becomes curious about who we are and what we do. That is where the internet and AI can help us.

Social media can help us extend the life of our events beyond the day they happen. AI can help us tell our stories more often and in different ways. Most importantly, the combination of social media and AI can help someone who has never heard of the Ontelaunee Region AACA discover a community here worth getting to know. AI will not create the friendships, the laughter, the tours, or the memories. We do that.

AI can simply help more people see them. And perhaps that is one way we begin inviting the next generation of members along for the ride.

President's Message

Venimus, Vidimus, Cenavimus

It's time to celebrate! We're approaching the end of another year of our shared interest in antique vehicles and our pleasure in knowing and working with one another. The things we do in the Ontelaunee Region AACA give us a sense of purpose as individuals while bringing enjoyment to the many people who attend our two big events each year. We also share some of the fruits of our labor through donations to other organizations and scholarships for students.

The tours we share show us new and varied things, while providing an opportunity to enjoy driving on our area's highways among beautiful scenery. We get to spend time together; it never gets old; and it's always refreshing and fun.

On Sunday, November 15, we will gather at the Blue Mountain Family Restaurant in Shartlesville for our annual President's Banquet—although it could have a more inclusive title. Of course, it's the gathering where we install our officers for 2027. But it's so much more than that.

This banquet gives the club a chance to say “thank you” to the officers, committee chairs, bakers, and tourmasters who led us through 2026. We can reconnect with past club presidents who attend; we’ll remember members we lost during the past year; and we’ll applaud those who have achieved 25-year or 50-year membership status.

Then we’ll close the afternoon with great entertainment: Glenn Miller, who bills himself as “the BIG one-man band,” has entertained far and wide in our area, including for more than 30 years at the Great Allentown Fair. I hope you’ll sign up to attend this year’s President’s Banquet.

Oh, and I shouldn’t forget to translate the title of this column. Julius Caesar coined the phrase Veni, Vidi, Vici: I came, I saw, I conquered. I’ve adapted that famous expression to something I’ve heard club members sometimes say about our times together, and about the time I hope we’ll have on November 15:
Venimus, Vidimus, Cenavimus...

Lester Manwiller presented the Treasurer’s report, including the ending balances for all accounts for May, June, July, and August.

A motion to approve the treasurer’s report was made by Bob Hobaugh and seconded by Sue Hinkle. The motion carried.

Committee Reports

Membership: Phyllis Peters was absent; her report was given by the Secretary.

Cheri read a letter from Michael addressed to Ontelaunee AACA Officers and Members. Michael is now a full-time student at Temple University and works a part-time job on weekends. Behind the Price at the Pump

Step right up, folks. See the wonders of the world. Take in the spectacle. Watch as the numbers defy description and surpass even your ability to reach into your pocket and pay. Yes, folks, a gallon is still a gallon, but now it is bigger and better than ever before.

Excuse the carnival barker in me, and yes, folks, this is about gasoline prices.

And no, before you read anything political into this, what I am going to say is not political at all. It is simply an observation and an on-the-ground assessment of where we are and why prices are so high.

You and I are caught in the middle of paying for the sins of the past, and there is plenty of blame to go around. But some of the blame should be placed on market demand and local infrastructure. Is some of it due to a supply shortage caused by a war in an oil-rich region of the world? Sure.

But oil cost per barrel is only about 50% of the cost of the fuel you get. The rest is divided among production costs, marketing efforts, advertising, federal & state taxes, and political lobbying for the industry.

I am only going to speak about production costs here.

We all know the others are a problem, but not many realize that the cost of refining has been running about twice as high since COVID. Why? Likely because of the loss of refining capacity in the United States, especially on the East and West Coasts.

Several fuel-based refineries closed since COVID, when demand fell because we simply were not driving as much. Here in Pennsylvania, the former Sunoco Energy Solutions refinery at Marcus Hook in Philly closed after a massive 2019 fire and subsequent EPA fines.

Of course, aging pipes were to blame, and there was no guarantee they could remain in business anyway. But there went 335,000 barrels a day of capacity with it, right move or not.

Marcus Hook was not the only closure. Overall, U.S. refining capacity is down by approximately 1.7 million barrels per day. Some refineries closed because their aging plants were no longer safe and could not be economically upgraded to meet new regulations.

Also, many of our older plants are designed to refine heavy crude, such as that from Venezuela or the Middle East. The problem is that while more U.S. oil than ever is being pumped from the ground, we have not increased manufacturing capacity to handle it. Most oil from the United States is light, sweet crude, and many plants are not compatible with that.

Our refineries cannot refine all of what we extract from the ground, so some of that oil is sold and shipped overseas.

Meanwhile, U.S.-based oil companies are only too happy to buy oil from overseas to refine here while shipping some of our oil back overseas for refining. The crack spread—the difference between the cost of a barrel of oil and the cost of the finished fuel—is then added to the price. The crack spread pre-COVID had been $10–$16 a barrel, but right now is around $50–$60 a barrel.

“Well, build a new one,” you say.

Great, but it takes years to get the permits, and it is a huge investment.

Current estimates are that a new 500,000-barrel-a-day oil-to-fuel production plant costs $10 billion to $15 billion today, and is likely to cost $25 billion by the time it is built.

On top of that, nobody wants one in their backyard—even less so than data centers.

For this reason, the last U.S. refinery built was in Louisiana in 1976.

Don't look for new U.S. refineries anytime soon. We will retrofit some of the old ones to handle light sweet crude, and we should do that. But I think we can rule out many completely new ones.

Meanwhile, like you, I am sure I will still drive my old cars occasionally, even if it costs me a little more.

You can't put a price on enjoyment.

Have a good month.
